STOCK NOTES.

It is estimated that the western slope of Colorado will furnish the markets this fall 10,000 head of beef steers and that the average weight of the four-year-olds will be close to 1,200 pounds.

Five years ago Cochise and Pinal counties, Arizona Territory, combined did not have 10,000 cattle; now they are shipping stock both east and west and have within the borders of the counties named over 200,000 head.—Daily Times.

Hardcastle & Muford purchased this week, through the agency of the New Mexico Live Stock Company, the 2200 head of high grade cows and heifers which have been held for sale near Las Lunas for several weeks past. This purchase, together with this year's increase, will make 5,000 cattle these gentlemen have upon their range.—Socorro Bulletin.

A very peculiar and pernicious disease has made its appearance among the cattle in Sherman, Texas, and several head have died recently. The cattle are first stricken with blindness, followed with high fever, and refuse to take food of any kind, and die about the second or third day. The disease appears to be confined to one locality and every case has proved fatal.—Wilcox Stockman.

Arthur Weir, assistant manager of the Matador Cattle company, who own a fenced pasture in the Panhandle of Texas of 1,500,000 acres of land, in which they have a stock of 115,000 head of the best grade cattle in the state, has been spending several days in the city. He is here for the purpose of disposing of a bunch of 2,200 head of the cattle, which he drove over the trail about two months since, and which are now grazing in the Kirkpatrick ranch near Las Lunas.—Socorro Bulletin.

Exchange: Care should be exercised in the shipment of grass cattle. The first thing to be observed is the loading. The cars should not be packed so full that the cattle will have no opportunity of moving about, neither should they be so loosely loaded that the jangling of the cars will knock them about too freely. When an animal is lying down in a car, if it is at the end or along the side, there can be but little danger, and it is best not to disturb it. Only when one is stretched out on the floor should it be disturbed.

Deal gently with your horse stock. You cannot be too careful on this point, even with the young colts. Handle it with gentleness and care and cause it to understand that you mean to do it no harm. When it comes a full grown horse it has no cause to fear you, but it will, by natural instinct, regard you as its friend. Should you, on the other hand, frighten a colt when young, either by striking it or setting a dog on it and running about the pasture, or misuse in any other manner the little fellow, it will always remember it, and you are likely to have trouble with it later or when you come to break and use it as a work animal.—Globe Live Stock Journal.

Horse racing in Italy 100 years ago would have been a curious sight to the present generation of race goers, says a writer, as no riders were employed. Eight or ten horses were ranged in a row, their manes being almost concealed by ribbons. At the head of each stood a groom, who with difficulty restrained the impetuosity of his charge until the signal was given by discharging a cannon. At the sound, off they started with the fleetness of the wind, each trying to outstrip the other with as keen an emulation as though they had been urged on by the most skillful jockey. The conqueror was led back in triumph amid the blare of trumpets, the rattle of drums and the shouts of the populace, the victorious equine stalking in as majestically as though he were conscious of his triumph and appreciated the applause bestowed upon him.

The Franklyn Land & Cattle company, of Texas, is wrecked. About 50,000 head of cattle belonging to the company are unaccounted for. It needs no special moralizing to show that some one has stolen so much of the assets of the company. If the facts are necessary to show that some very pretty finessing has been done in handling the herd which has suffered so extraordinary a depletion, they will not be hard to find. Brilliant men in finance and commercial affairs have, in the past, wrecked large enterprises, then retired, and got religion in some instances, while their victims mourned and after awhile shot forth again to dazzle and victimize others. The inside history of the Franklyn company is interesting as illustrating the tendency of capital to idolize the meteoric man, and to surrender itself to his ambition and plans. The end is generally like the example we have before us in the present affairs of the Franklyn company. Texas has been a grievous sufferer in such matters.—Stock Grower.

Persian Horses and Horse Races.

The best horses in Persia are the Arabs, and after them come the Turcomans. Some of the latter attain to great size, and are used by the rich for display. The average Turcoman is a fleet and hardy horse capable of going from 100 to 150 miles without rest. He is educated to get along with very little water, and to subsist on balls of highly concentrated food the two principal ingredients of which are suet and barley flour. When the master contemplates a raid, he gradually reduces for a period of 30 days the food and water allowance of the horse, and thus insures its privation. Grass does not grow in the vicinity of Teheran, and the principal food of the horses is barley, except for two months each year, when the daily ration is of herbs possessed of laxative properties. Outside of the gates of Teheran is the race course, the longer circuit of which is about five miles. Only one meeting is held each twelve months, and it is at the beginning of the Persian New Year, the opening of Spring. Persians, Turcomans and a cross between the Cossack and Turcoman compete, and the chief race is five circuits, or about twenty-one miles. The purses are of gold and silver coins, tied up in little bags, which are pitched to the successful jockeys, who catch them in their turbans. No entrance fee is charged to the races, and no betting system is carried out. As high as 200,000 persons attend these contests, the walls overlook the course, and from there the spectators get a grand view of the horses. The Shah witnesses the sport from a pavilion, as do also his officers and members of the different legations. The jockeys are mainly boys, but sometimes a heavy weight, a full grown man, acts as pilot. The Arab from Bagdad is prized more highly than any other breed of horses. The ordinary saddle horse has an easy canter, and he is sure-footed, but lazy to a striking degree. The tourist has to use the lash freely to make any kind of speed between the rude stations which mark the course of the rough bridle paths.—Ex.

Two Ways of Doing It.

Coming from St. Louis on the sleeping car I fell in with a couple of men from the cowboy region down by the Indian Territory. They owned ranches there, and were talking about the cattle business. One was an Englishman and on his way back to the old country for a short visit. He was saying: "I counted 745 cattle in a field this side of Kansas City." He then took from his vest pocket a thing something like a silver watch. "This is a cattle counter," he explained. "You see there are three figures on the side. Now, as often as you press that little knob a figure changes for the one next higher. That's how it works," and he pressed the knob rapidly and the figures changed rapidly. "With this I can count up to 999 as fast as cattle can jump past me. In a field I have just to commence at one end and look at the cattle one by one, pressing this every time, and I won't make a mistake once in a hundred times."

"I never go in for those new-fangled arrangements," said the American ranchman. "I have a cowboy who has 100 buttons on a string. He can count cattle as fast as they run with that string. He has another string around his neck, and at every 100 counted he slips a button on the neck string. He can count 10,000 with his string as easily as you can 999 on that thing and do it as correctly too."—Comanche Chief.

A fine fish story comes from the Sucker State. It is said that a Genesee man floating down the Illinois went to sleep, leaving a stout fish line dangling in the water. When he awoke his boat was fifteen miles further up stream than when he went to sleep. A monster catfish had swallowed the bait and towed the boat, up the river.

ATTENTION!

TO THE PUBLIC.

Appreciating the patronage which a general public has bestowed upon us since we have opened our mercantile establishment at this place, we desire to call their attention to the following facts:

1st. We are constantly receiving fresh invoices of all classes of goods, direct from the east.

2nd. Buying our goods in person we have to pay no middle man's expenses.

3rd. And for that reason we can sell you any and a better class of goods at lower figures than any house on the line of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad. We defy competition. We will not be undersold. Be sure and call and examine goods and prices before purchasing elsewhere.
